Editorial Review

About the Author
Jeffrey Webber - Bio

Jeffrey Webber has been an avid RVer for forty years. During that time he and his wife have traveled around this beautiful country a number of times. He has owned a variety of recreational vehicles including Class A, Class B, and Class C motorhomes, travel trailers, and fifth wheel trailers. He has fully experienced the RV lifestyle.

Jeffrey was a public school educator for thirty-three years. Many of those years were spent as a Technology Facilitator for his school district.

In his first book, entitled The New Professional Person's Retirement Lifestyle, Mr. Webber discusses specific, detailed, creative, and innovative activity-based recommendations for the retiree. The reader is offered choices to assist in the development of that all-important plan for retirement, which can create a revitalized outlook for the future.

In his second book, entitled Technology & Your Retirement Lifestyle: Tools For The New You, he discusses how life can be more accommodating during the retirement years using the "tools of technology." These same tools do indeed support a mobile lifestyle.

He has also published an article on retirement planning in Sourcebook, which is a journal for financial planners affiliated with the AIG/Royal Alliance Companies. Jeffrey is passionate about living life to the fullest during the retirement years. He and his wife have generally experienced most of the recommendations in this book.

CHAPTER 1: WHAT DO I WANT FROM RETIREMENT?

START WITH A PLAN!

If you are beginning your Third Age (there's that new terminology again), and you are considering the costly purchase of an RV, you really do need to set some goals for yourself.

It is important for you to take stock of yourself and formulate a course of action that you will definitely follow. You will need to engage in some thoughtful self-analysis to assist you in focusing on what you really want to do during retirement.

Here are some important considerations when developing that plan. * Take a personal inventory. Consider your personal strengths and things that you would like to do better. * Start simply and do not overburden yourself. Attempt to create a balance in your life between activities and recreation. * Be creative! Remember, we are living longer, more healthy lives * Remember the R words: reinvention; rediscovery; redefinition; revitalization; realization

When you've come up with a course of action, then we can begin to think about the RV lifestyle.

My wife and I have been RVers for forty years. We've always had the perspective that the RV lifestyle is a kind of tool. It can help you put together and implement plans and that you've devised.

Certainly, a mainstay of the RV lifestyle is the support it gives you if you have leisure activities in that all-important plan. I am reminded of Ernie Zelinski's book, The Joy of Not Working. He encourages you to consider leisure activities that turn you on now, new activities that you have considered doing, and activities that will get you physically fit. So, if part of your plan includes playing golf, biking, fishing, hiking, or swimming, your RV can obviously take you where the action is.

In my first book, The New Professional Person's Retirement Lifestyle, I discuss chapter after chapter of things to do during your retirement. If you incorporate ideas from the book into your retirement plan, your RV can become your real base of operations. For example, if you are interested in volunteerism, you can readily volunteer from the comfort of the rig, or, the rig can accommodate you while at a volunteer destination. The same scenario applies to working while camping, commonly called workamping. These topics will be discussed later chapters.

In essence, your recreational vehicle becomes a tool with which to implement your retirement plan. My wife and I pursue cultural interests, hobbies, we continue our education, and we invest, all in the comfort of our RV.

In 2006 we traveled across the country during the winter months in our Class A motorhome. Choosing from a variety of attractions from guidebooks and various websites, we chose to visit the Georgia O'Keefe Museum (one of the most famous art museums) in Santa Fe, New Mexico. We were able to locate a city campground with public transportation available right outside the gate. During our stay, we dined at various restaurants and enjoyed other cultural attractions. Additionally, we had all the comforts of home available in the RV including cable TV and wireless Internet. We enjoyed similar experiences in Las Cruces, New Mexico and Tucson, Arizona.

My wife and I love to bike. We own a tandem and we've biked in various locations around the country in an effort to explore the natural beauty of our country. So, when we reach a destination to bike, we do so directly from the campground from our home on wheels.

Again, all of these activities go toward achieving a goal that is part of our long-term plan for retirement.

I'll discuss more ways this can work in forthcoming chapters of this book.
