The Paci Fairy By Melissa Burnett

Dear Parents and Guardians, You are not alone!!! Getting rid of the Pacifier can be a very challenging issue. After my own personal experience and many test studies I feel confident that with the endorsements of Pediatricians and Pediatric dentist, I have developed a tear free method. Meet "Palina" the Paci Fairy - A childrens fable that is a fun simple solution to getting rid of the Pacifier. This story is about how Palina Paciloo from Paci-town becomes The Paci Fairy. - I offer a Seven steps to a one night success story program that you can find in the back of the book. After my own frustrations I did many test studies and research to create a universal method that would rid the Paci and leave a confident child and a happy parent/guardian. The Paci Fairy is trademarked, all rights reserved. You can also find the seven steps on my Amazon page.

Review

It worked! It really worked!!! I have to admit I was really skeptical. To say my daughter was obsessed with her paci is an understatement. Her preschool teacher came across an article in which your book was mentioned. She knew I was scared to death to take away her paci and what the aftermath would be, and was looking for anything to help. I ordered your book exactly one week before my daughters 3rd birthday-her birthday was the deadline we gave ourselves to take away her paci. I know, cruel taking it away on her birthday! That's how we did it with my first daughter-cold turkey. I just had this gut feeling that "cold turkey" was not going to work with my youngest though. So after overnighing the book, we read it morning, noon and night. I even sent it to school for her teachers to read to her and the rest of the class. I wasn't sure if a week would be enough time but I figured we'd try our best. I went big with the gifts that the paci fairy would be leaving. I wanted her to be impressed. Also, I let her fall asleep with the paci and then went in and took it before she woke up. She asked for it a couple times that day. Nothing major. And every now and again she'll ask for it. We'll just explain why the paci fairy took it. But I have to say it went significantly better than I ever imagined. It's really sweet to when she sees a baby with a paci. She says "mommy look they have my paci". So, thank you! I was so fearful of how this would unfold and it was not nearly as traumatic as I had expected! We are officially paci free!!!! --Tep July 22, 2014

My 4 year old was told by our pediatrician that the Paci Fairy was coming to town and leaving her a gift for her pacifier since my daughter was still using the pacifier to sleep. My daughter's response was 'I don't like the Paci Fairy' I thought I was going to have a huge battle in front of me, but once we got the book, my daughter became more and more interested in giving away her pacifiers. And when the day came, she had a spring on her step. No problem, no tears. Really helpful book, we keep reading the story to this day. --N Altenburger January 6th, 2013

My daughter was approaching her third birthday and still relied on her binky for comfort. I knew the day was coming when she would have to give it up but I dreaded taking it away or hiding it from her. So I found the Paci Fairy book online and gave it a try. I read the story to her a few nights every night before her birthday and told her that the fairy would come the night of her big day to take her binky and give it to another baby. I asked if she was ready and she said yes. She loved the book and was fascinated by the fairy coming to her house. So the next morning her binky was gone. Keep in mind the fairy also left a prize in return of her generous donation which helped to take the edge off her missing lovie. The first night without a binky was tough but she pushed through and we read the story for a few more nights. I really don't know what I would have done without this book. It was a huge help during the transition. Now when we see a baby out in public with a binky she says "The fairy gave my binky to that baby, isn't that nice mommy?" and she still occasionally loves to read the story about the Paci Fairy. --LM Harper November 14th, 2012

About the Author

I grew up In Orange County, California and graduated from USC with a BA in Psychology. I have been writing since my teenage years and even had a children's book manuscript before I graduated high school. With my writing on the back burner I moved to LA to become a movie star! This is where I met my husband, and we had a little girl named Alexis. When Lexi turned 2, I had my first battle with the Pediatrician about getting rid of the pacifier. I was in shock...how was I going to do this? ..and it was at about this time that I knew my daughter was not the only one addicted to this beloved pacifier! The thought of getting rid of the paci kept me up at night and thus, I turned my energies into research to figure out a way to overcome this pacifier obstacle. Palina the Paci Fairy was born. I had always been a writer of poetry and short stories and even that children's book in high school but it was my daughter whom inspired me to take this seriously and fulfill what I believe was and is my destiny.
